Master of Arts in Martial Arts

The MA in Martial Arts

This one-year course of study (36-credit hours) is offered entirely online with optional residency. This hands-on, project driven program for the aspiring martial artist educator adds a new dimension to your sports practice. Martial arts is a philosophy, a way of life, an attitude, a passion, a hobby or a profession.

This program takes a holistic approach and seeks to train the complete martial artist.

Professors are world and national champions in their discipline, they are certified martial arts trainers and have an impressive tracking record. They bring to the online and on-campus classroom and dojo the blend of physical and mental preparation.

Program Objectives

The Master of Arts in Martial Arts degree is designed to broaden your knowledge and experience in the field and add a deeper dimension to your practice and increase your impact in the dojo both as a student, as an instructor or as a manager.

Curriculum Highlights

In addition to various subjects and personal reflection, martial arts students prepare several small projects culminating in a major proposal for enhancing their martial arts practice, dojo, or professional life.

Semester One

Martial Arts History

Where does your martial art come from? How were martial arts born? How did they develop? Documents, videos, books will take you through a journey in time to meet the figures and events.

Martial Arts Applied Philosophy

Martial arts is not just a physical activity, it is indeed an art, a way of life. What is the philosophy behind it? Create your own vision of martial arts philosophy by learning how to apply your knowledge and know-how in daily life and work.

Martial Arts Geography

Time to travel around the world and discover different practices and approaches. Branches of different martial arts are born every day. Why is this phenomenon blooming?

Martial Arts Anatomy

Essential of modern and ancient medical principles no martial artist can live without. Learn some of the practical skills still very unknown to most. Prevent injury and adapt the practice to every person's needs, depending on age and condition.

Semester Two

Martial Arts Management

Create or re-create your dojo to upgrade your practice and to offer a unique experience to your students.

Martial Arts Communication Skills

How do you motivate? How do you give feedback? Keeping your students interested is also an art, and to recruit more a skill.

Comparative Martial Arts

Advising students to choose their martial art is a responsibility. Looking into the different angles of martial arts will give you a new perspective and an innovative approach to advising and adapting yourself.

Martial Arts in Competition

Competitions in martial arts do not have the same spirit as in other sports. Learn the psychological component of preparing and participating in any type of martial art event.

Capstone

Create your unique project under the supervision of a faculty member.

Krav Maga Elective

Students can take the following elective for additional credit or as a replacement of one of the courses offered (at additional cost and upon approval required by program director). The course is offered on site in Israel or online. Course requirements and assessment will differ.

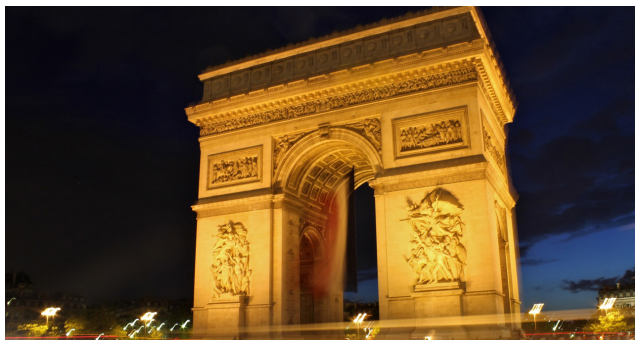

ONSITE: You will take a tour of the historical roots and philosophy of Israeli Krav Maga and receive hands-on training. Thanks to the guided tours of historical sites, Krav Maga classes, multi-media and research supports, you will gain a deep understanding the cultural background that created this unique approach to self defense.

ONLINE: You will learn about the historical roots of Israeli Krav Maga and will also explore the psychological aspects of self defense, awareness and combative mindset. Real life cases, drawn from Israeli life, will be used to illustrate how to incorporate these methods for effective daily self defense and personal empowerment.
